Over the past years, homosexuality has been a significant topic of discussion in our society. Although progress towards altering public perception of homosexuality has been made in the last thirty years, significant homophobia remains pervasive in our country. Homosexuals are also an individual who would rather choose love than hatred and peace than war. As with many minority groups, the one thing they all have in common is to be free from hatred and discrimination.

This case study was conducted to describe the experiences of a homosexual who suffered and later on cope up with discrimination.

The main sources of data were from the interview participated in by selected a selected participant. Lichtman's 3Cs of qualitative data analysis was done to analyze and interpret the results of the study.

The three themes emerged from the experiences are: The Real Persona, The Body of Sufferings, The Will to Survive.
