Job is one of the most important needs by the people because we depend on it to sustain our needs such as foods and clothes. As our participant needed a better salary, from a helper in funeral he decided to take an embalming work as an embalmer. At first, he is not comfortable with it but as time goes by, he fully accepted it and love it.

This case study was conducted to know the story and experiences of our participant in his work.

The main sources of information were from the interview that our participant had stated. Litchman's 3Cs of qualitative analysis was done to analyze the study.

The themes are according and come from the experiences our participant had described.
